MARK ON FOREHEAD OF ONE DEEPENS DEATH MYSTERY

ally affected by the sight of the photograph of the man he says is Hughes.

Police have announced the Duncannville tragedy is a case of murder and suicide.

MEET ON COAST

"Six years ago," Carney said, "I was discharged from the army in California and went to a room in a house at either 224 or 276 Bay street, San Francisco, with another man who was my buddy in the service. That was in June, 1928.

"A man, his wife and their three daughters accepted another apartment in the same house. One day he introduced himself as Homer Hughes, and said he was a captain or some officer in the Salvation Army. The girls were then about nine, six, and two years old. His wife's name was Edith.

"Hughes asked us if we would not like to live with him and his family, saying he had plenty of room, and we accepted the invitation. That's how I happen to know him all.

"The children, I recall, all had light hair at that time. All the girls had noticeably wavy hair.

"I'm trying to get located here," he told me, when I met him Monday, and I'm looking for a job. My intended wife and the children are in West Philadelphia, trying to get a place to stay with a relative of hers.

"If I don't get work here I'm going on to Pittsburgh," he added. I think he mentioned a brother or a brother-in-law.

"Hughes weighed about 155 pounds and was about 5 feet 10 inches tall. His hair was black and wavy. He was wearing a brown overcoat and a blue serge suit, and I didn't think he looked shabby at all."

DIDN'T SEE CHILDREN

Carney said he did not see the children when he met Hughes in Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, Emmet Hamilton of Cleveland, who reported pictures of the dead children, remembered his daughters, whom he had not seen in three years, viewed the bodies. But the Hamilton children were found with the mother in Philadelphia.

Several indications that the children at least are from Boston are still promising and Earl Sylvester, bus driver, was more positive than ever after viewing the pictures. Supplementing Sylvester's new identification were developments indicating the victims may be from Lynn or from Maine.

GAVE THEM SHIRTS

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Borkowski, proprietors of a restaurant in Central square, Lynn, told of providing three destitute children, accompanied by their parents, with shirts of the type worn by the Carle victims.

They tentatively identified pictures of the victims as the children of the couple, who said they were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brooks of Clifton Forge, Va., homeless, wandering, seeking employment.

There was corroboration of their identification from other sources. Jack Stone, proprietor of the Stone Shoe Company, Union street, Lynn, who sold the shoes to the Borkowskis provided for the children, said he sawed children's shoes which have the type of soles found on the shoes of the oldest victim.

These are crepe rubber with a circle trade mark reading "Auburn square spud" Crepe, and are made by the Auburn Rubber Company of Auburn, Ind. The "Auburn square" refers to the pattern of the tread, rather than a locally believed variety.

FAMILIAL TO MANY

Francis Frank L. Dawson, whose West Lynn boat takes in McDough square, viewed pictures of the victims and said:

"The middle one looks very familiar. I feel certain that child was in this neighborhood."

Doll, Puzzle, Little Garments Pathetic Clues in 'Babes in Wood' Mystery

This doll, child's puzzle and small sock were found in an abandoned Gladstone bag at Carlisle, Pa., about three miles from the spot where lay the bodies of the mysteriously slain "babes in the wood." It is hoped the articles may assist in bringing about identification of the children.

With a relief driver from Hartsburg to Cresson, which is less than 10 miles from Duncannville where the man and woman were slain.

White has identified these children "from Boston" as the victims, and the woman with them as the victim at Duncannville. His identification is disputed, however, by Chambers, who says the children were too young, and by the driver who relieved him at Hartsburg, who says the man.

The cause of the children's deaths remained unexplained through a second autopsy, but the discovery that the oldest girl had been beaten indicated all had been slain.

Dr. Vanes Rothrock, coroner's physician, and the oldest of the parent sisters had been struck on the forehead with a blunt instrument.

"The blow did not kill the child, but it probably knocked her unconscious."

"That's her! The slightest doubt that she was struck. The injury was made by some blunt instrument and the time might have been anywhere from an hour to a day before she died. The blow caused a large bruise on the brain tissue, although the skull was not fractured."

The so-called "cross brace" reported to have been found on the forehead of the "middle" sister appeared eliminated, with medical opinion that it had been used, but had been discarded, probably at the time of birth.

BUS DRIVER "POSITIVE" Most important of the new local developments was the reiteration by Sylvester, following his full-face view of the children, of his opinion that they rode with him, in the company of a woman, on his bus from Boston to New York last Wednesday.

The new pictures were shown Sylvester by a Boston Evening American reporter. Of the pictures of the oldest girl, he said:

"That's her! I'm positive. The oldest girl. It looks just like her. I don't remember the other two well but I do remember talking to one. I don't recall whether the children were traveling on full or half fares."

Philadelphia police officers traveled with one last Wednesday.

Another local development was the discovery that one of two Boston department stores may have sold the coats worn by the children.

RNA numbers on these coats led to their tracing to the firm of H. A. Block Co., New York. The two local stores handle Block clothes. The spot where the mother is believed to have been slain is in the vicinity of the store.

Learn whether coats bearing the reported numbers were sent to Boston in shipments received here last spring and this fall.

BOSTON CLUE IN COATS The woman shot to death Saturday by a man who then killed himself in Duncannville, 13 miles from the spot where the children were found, was proved by autopsy not to have been their mother.

Stores of cloth stores may have sold the coats worn by the children, police and the Boston Evening American for investigation. Thousands of clues flowed into the Pan-

This sweater and these dresses were found with children's toys and some articles of a man's clothing in a traveling bag abandoned near the Carlisle, Pa., woodland, where lay the dead bodies of three fair-haired little girls, who are still unidentified. Police hope that the clothing may furnish a clue which may help to clear up the mystery of who the children were, where they came from and how they lost their lives.

about 30 years old, although she may have been a little younger.

"The youngest of the little girls talked with me and I made a lot of her. At one of the stopping points she climbed into my lap."

The mother called this child "Jennie." I did not hear any other names.

"In assisting the children on and off the bus at rest points, I noticed that the coat of one was torn away at the shoulder. This I described to police before I saw the dead children and said that the coat of one was torn in the same fashion."

POSITIVE OF ONE "The police took me to view the bodies of the children and I told them I was positive in the instant and morally certain in the other two that they were the children who rode on my bus."

"Then they took me to look at the woman shot at Duncannville by a man who killed himself and I told them that this woman was the woman who rode in my bus with the children. I am sure she was."

"Williams relieved me at Hartsburg."

ROOSEVELT MAN MISSING IN SHOE LEA MARGOLIN CASE

By Associated Press Lowell, Nov. 27.—A presidential request that shoe firms contemplating moving from this area put off such plans until the federal advisory board investigating conditions here has reported to the National Recovery Administration, was made public today by Representative Edwin Rogers.

Mr. Rogers said the request was contained in a letter from Louis McNulty Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt. She promptly showed it to Joseph E. Brodinski, chairman of the advisory board, and he, in turn, informed manufacturers.

The advisory board will remain here today, and tomorrow will go to the State House to part of the petition by Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn, who has asked the shoe industry in the state be investigated by the government.

Thugs Rob, Beat Man on Common

Three men leaped out of the shrubbery on Boston Common and attacked and robbed a young man, 24, of Warren street, South End.

They seized his wrist watch, pulled $250 from his pockets, and attempted to tear his overcoat off his back, but were prevented by his struggle.

The thieves were arrested by the Boston Police Department.

TICKET SELLER GIVES NEW CLUE TO 3 BABES

Cresson, on her way to Hartsburg, she had only one ticket and the children rode free. So I asked her the ages of the youngsters. She said one was 12 months, another was two years and the third was three."

"She was selling the ticket to her, the man went out and bought the ticket for her. He was very friendly to me. I think she was a mother. And I didn't pay too close attention to her. There was another customer in the office, who was interested, and I kept my eye on him most of the time."

"The woman with the children weighed about 115 pounds, was about five feet six inches tall and dressed rather poorly. She didn't make much conversation with me. I didn't learn her name, since we didn't take the names of those who buy like tickets unless they are buying insurance."

"But she did say she was going home to her husband and that she had been in Boston for a while visiting. She said her home was in Cresson, Pa. The man and woman asked them to come up to Hartsburg next morning. He was rather short, about five feet six; yet not too short, and weighed about 150 or 160 pounds. He wore dark clothes and soft gray hair."

"During the time they remained in the terminal the mother chatted with the children, asking them if they would be glad to get home to their daddy."

"All the children were sandy-haired, and so was the woman who bought the ticket."

HOUSE STRUGGLE FOR THE NOUS

By Associated Press Washington, Nov. 27.—Two members of the House Ways and Means Committee, Democrat, of Kentucky, and Republican, of New Jersey, today dictated the solitary bonus would pass the House over a presidential veto in the coming session.

Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said today in Warm Springs it would be difficult to pass the bonus over a veto if his side of the Capitol.

Bacharach and Vinson said they had found no opposition among House members they had talked with in their payment of the bonus. Bacharach said he believed 75 percent of the Republicans would vote to override a presidential veto.

'Among Boston's BEST DRESSED WOMEN

(NO. 2)—Miss Kathleen Moran

Always Chic

SPORT CLOTHES ATTRACTIVE, SHE SAYS

By MARGARET D. O'CONNELL
Miss Kathleen Moran, of the Back Bay.

She is the second selection of the committee choosing 10 of Greater Boston's best dressed women.

The committee yesterday named Mrs. Robert Farrington, of Newton, and today it agreed upon Miss Moran, brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Moran of 33 Marlborough street, and Washington.

So the married and the unmarried woman now share equally in the distinction of unanimous agreement of the judges. Mrs. Leland Powers and the noted artists, John Lavelle and John Wharf.

Miss Moran was wearing her favorite evening gown when I interviewed her.

Her gown was a creation of white and gold silk, with a lustrous border of white fox encircling the tunic. The undershirt was according to plan.

I soon discovered that Miss Moran, one of the smallest of the young fashionables, selects only two types of clothes—trim, tailored things for day wear—daring, sophisticated gowns for evening.

Although she has lived in Berlin, Vienna and Paris she—like Mrs. Farrington—buys clothes produced by this country's fashion experts in preference to importations.

Prefers U. S. Gowns

She detests the ankle-length cocktail dress, preferring sport clothes for teas, luncheons and the theater.

Colors for day wear—black, white or grey for evening.

"A well dressed woman must be properly groomed before she starts to think about what she is going to wear."

"So many girls, while beautifully clothed, have hair that looks as if it had been thrown together. Or else makeup is not properly blended. Little things are so essential to outstanding smartness."

"Few fifteen-year-old girls are so smartly dressed. In the first place, most of them do not choose their own clothes. Their mothers select the clothes with an eye to making the daughters pretty—but smart."

Do I prefer buying my clothes here rather than abroad? Definitely yes! For one thing American clothes are so much better made and the prices are so much more reasonable."

Chic Weave Suit

One of Miss Moran's latest contributions to chic is a capucine-orange basket weave suit, with natty buttoned jacket that stops just short of the neckline to reveal a blouse of tortoise-shell stripes and silk.

A touch of the same material is colored in blue fox.

A hat in a matching shade of tortoise-shell brown, in a daring copy of a Casque cap, perches jauntily over one eye; its only adornment is a perky little bow.

Miss Moran has nothing she calls a hobby, but enjoys a brisk canter along the backstreets on crisp, fall mornings.

(Tomorrow Mrs. O'Connell will name the committee's third selection and will tell you what she wears and has to say about clothes.)

ANNE, 3 FEET, SAYS ANDREW,
6 FEET, MADE LOVE

By Universal Service
New York, Nov. 27.—Miss Anne Sutton, though only 39 inches high and tipping the scales at 55 pounds, demanded full-sized compensation for an allegedly battered heart, when she filed suit in Supreme Court here against Andrew Murphy, Jr. She declared she had been grieved and asked $100,000 damages.

But Murphy, a former prizefighter and built like one, threw Miss Sutton's "love" back into the middle class when he characterized the action as "an attempt at shade-down of trifling imagination." He added:

"You know how we Irish are. We don't shake so easily." Miss Sutton, who is 22, a graduate of Indiana State Teachers' College and daughter of a Pittsburgh physician, stated her romance flourished from March until May, when she left for Chicago to exhibit herself at the Century of Progress.

Then a week ago, according to her petition, she discovered the ruddy-haired Adonis was already married and the father of two children.

Through his brother, Murphy, who is the proprietor of "Andy Murphy's Place" across from Madison Square Garden, had this to say:

"I'm a big fellow nearly six feet and she's 30 some inches and I ask you! There are limits. Certainly I never made love to her."

"My wife took the suit with a laugh, thank goodness."

'HOT DOG' Heir ELOPES

STEVENS WED TO MISS GAVAGAN

GALA BRIDAL FOR BROOKLINE GIRL WAS PLANNED

Romance and the Harvard-Yale game proved too much for Miss Hope Gavanagan of Brookline and her fiancé, Harry Stevens, 2d, of New York.

He is grandson of the "hot dog king" who made a fortune in baseball parks, race tracks and sports arenas.

Instead of waiting for their marriage date, which wasn't so far away, the young couple eloped and were married at the municipal chapel in New York, Miss Gavanagan's mother announced today.

Mrs. Gavanagan, who lives in Washington street, Brookline, took the news philosophically, but said that the sudden wedding had disrupted plans for an elaborate ceremony to have been staged in Medford at a wealthy relative's summer estate.

Miss Gavanagan is 24, and an art school graduate. She met Stevens in Miami two years ago. The young husband was graduated from Yale in 1932, and entered the business.

MRS. VANDERBILT COMMENTS ON HEARST SURVEY

By International News Service

Washington, Nov. 27.—Confident of regaining absolute custody of her ten-year-old daughter Gloria, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt is here today for four days of "rest and pleasure." Mrs. Vanderbilt arrived here last night from New York.

She hesitated to speak of her expected appeal from decision of Supreme Court Justice Carrow in New York, which affords her only week-ends and holidays with her daughter. However, she said:

"I certainly expect to carry this fight as well as I win it. I am very hopeful."

Commenting on a symposium of judicial opinions from over the country, published yesterday in the Hearst newspapers, reviewing Justice Carrow's decision, Mrs. Vanderbilt said:

"These opinions certainly bear out my side of the case. I have no doubt, after reading them, and receiving many letters of warm sympathy from all parts of the country, that there is a strong popular favor in my behalf."

She also declared she was willing to have made public testimony taken at the nine weeks' trial, most of which was behind closed doors.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Gloria will remain in this country if the mother wins her appeal, she said, adding:

"I think America is a grand place."

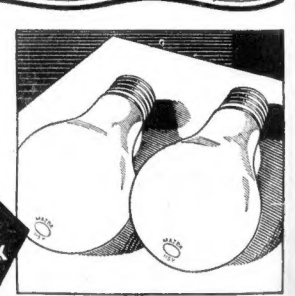

A mocking bird is in our midst

.... are you list'nin'?

THE CHEAP, inferior quality electric lamp bulb is a sort of mocking bird. And it gives a pretty fair imitation of the genuine article—the lamp bulb of true, known quality.

But—don't listen to it. You'll regret it if you do. Don't for a minute believe that it is "just as good." It can't be. The very fact that it is cheaper in price than lamp bulbs of known quality made by the largest, most reputable American manufacturers is evidence that it hasn't the quality and hasn't the value.

buy your electric lamp bulbs at the Edison Shops, or at some reliable dealer's. Here you will obtain lamps of standard quality and known value. They save you money because they last much longer and they give you all the light you pay for.

PICK 62 WOMEN ON PANEL FOR LINDY JURY

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 27.—Drawing of the panel from which a jury will be selected to try Bruno Richard Hauptmann on the charge of murdering little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was accomplished in a routine, matter-of-fact manner in the Hunterdon County Court here today.

From a list of 320 citizens of the county, 120 names were drawn. Later the list will be cut to 65, and from this number, the jury, which will decide whether or not Hauptmann will go to the electric chair, will be selected.

Hauptmann was not in court during the proceedings. He remained in "Cell No. 1" in the small red jail just back of the courtroom.

After the session was called to order, Sheriff John Curries and a group of men and women sat at a round table and the sheriff began picking small white disks, containing numbers, from a large bowl.

The first number drawn was 200. This proved to be Wesley E. Schuyler, a painter, of Flemington. The first woman selected was Loretta Tonnison, housewife, who lives on a farm near here.

In routine fashion, the drawing proceeded until the 100 names were selected. The sheriff then called each number as he took disks from the bowl. As soon as the number was called, the clerk of court read the name the number represented from a list.

Sixty-two women were on the list of 100 selected. Among them were Mrs. Jennie Curries, wife of the sheriff, and Frances Updike, a nurse. Mrs. Annie Hauptmann, wife of the defendant, is staying at the Updike home with her children.

Four of those whose names were picked from the bowl are carpenters. Hauptmann earned his livelihood as a carpenter.

STUDENTS RIOT IN VIENNA

By Associated Press
Vienna, Nov. 27.—Austrian students today attacked the Czechoslovakian legation in reprisal for recent anti-German riots at the University in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, but were repulsed by police, who battered them with swords and clubs.

Vienna was thrown into a fresh turmoil by the demonstrations. The students rained bricks and stones at the Czech-controlled newspaper, Der Tag und Die Nacht, smashing almost every window in the plant, wrecking the interior of the offices, and terrorizing the editors and printers.

Then, several hundred strong, the students marched to the Czech legation shouting: "Down with Czechoslovakia; revenge our fellow students in Prague!"

They found the Czech legation encircled by police who charged into them with their sidearms fixed.

Mounted police charged into the crowd which had gathered in the Ringstrasse near the Czech legation. They rode pell-mell into the women and children who were waiting for street cars, knocking several of them down.

Broken off, they marched to the St. Franziskus, where the demonstration assumed a Nazi aspect, the students singing the German national anthem.

President Tomasek, he added, "is very much in line with his own and quite ready to keep up the fear of Japan among our people so that he can get a bigger navy."

Declining the Japanese justified in being so, McNary said he was preparing to go overboard and call for war. "We are in a position to fight," he said. "We are in a position to fight," he said. "We are in a position to fight," he said.

HITLER FEARS NEW CRISIS, CALLS ON TROOPS

time for military men in Germany. Heinrich Himmler, commander of the S. S., in addressing a big demonstration at Coblenz during the weekend, was said to have alluded to the existing bad feeling between his group and the army.

HITLER WARNED
Baron Werner Von Fritzsche, chief of the Reichswehr, in a memorandum to Hitler, said plainly in discussing Nazi suppressive methods that unless a more liberal spirit prevailed the government would face opposition from all sides in case of war.

He told Hitler something must be done about the bad blood between the S. S. and the Reichswehr. The emergency situation was not interpreted as a challenge to France because of the approaching Nazi plebiscite and the expansion of France's military program.

One suggestion was that the Reichswehr be kept in readiness to prevent impulsive troop movements from crossing into France at the time of the plebiscite.

Rome, Nov. 27.—Concern was expressed by political observers today over reports of a near state of emergency in Germany.

Coming at a moment when the international situation is an delicate, due in part to Yugoslav charges of Hungarian complicity in the Marseilles assassinations, the development was received with alarm.

Rome observers said Berlin opinions that the action has no bearing on foreign affairs failed to carry conviction since no explanation was received here showing a domestic emergency. The reported postponement of army marriages was viewed as significant.

Italy Hits France;
Joins With Hungary
By Universal Service
Rome, Nov. 27.—Italy rebuked France and lined up with Hungary against Yugoslavia by refusing to extradite two alleged accomplices of the terrorist who assassinated King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Marichou of France at Marseille.

The men whom Italy refused to hand over to France are Dr. Anton Pavlovich, who French authorities charge was the master mind of the assassination plot, and Egor Klatenski, Pavlovich's assistant.

Both are Croats. It was to that province in Yugoslavia that the roots of the terrorist organization, which condemned Alexander, were traced.

The court of appeal at Turin ruled against France's request for surrender of the two men for trial. Hungary was responsible for the assassination, because terrorists inside their base of operations on Hungarian territory.

In effect, the court's decision evened Italy's score with France and notified Yugoslavia that Italy is definitely on Hungary's side in combating Yugoslavia's charge before the League of Nations that Hungary was responsible for the assassination, because terrorists inside their base of operations on Hungarian territory.

NOT GUILTY'S WOMAN'S PLEA

Mrs. Cecilia Berkowitz of Newport avenue, Winthrop, in whose home Michael Gagan and James Barry—indicted in connection with the Brooklyn City Hall holdup—were arrested last month, was arraigned in East Boston court today on a charge of receiving stolen money.

She pleaded not guilty and was freed in $2000 bail when the case was continued to Dec. 7.

According to Police Chief William F. Pamprom of Winthrop, Mrs. Berkowitz claimed $1700 found in a paper bag when the two men were taken from her lodging house, but today she denied this.

Her arraignment in East Boston followed her release in Boston, where she was held as an accessory after the holding.

Amherst, Nov. 27.—Displaying contempt for the season, a blueberry bush in the Massachusetts State College orchard hurt into bloom today.

John A. Bailey, assistant research professor of pomology, who reported the bloom, said the blueberry bush is of an early variety, usually the first to blossom in the spring, but even he thinks the bush is making a serious mistake.

words, even in law books, without deeds, amount to little. He was angry when Harry Straus, charged with homicide, was brought in by policemen to be photographed, looking. Police Commissioner Valentine said, "as if he had just stepped out of a barber's chair."

Mr. Straus has been arrested 13 times since 1927, and never convicted. He started rising up his record of arrests when 18 years old. Commissioner Valentine said to the police: "A fellow like him ought to come in here well marked up. His type ought to be muscled up."

Such talk might discourage New York city's population of two or three hundred thousand professional criminals, except for the fact that many of them know how to adjust matters after they are arrested. The "muscling up" process is not for everybody.

Chicago thinks the attorney-general will drop all charges against Samuel Insull.

The latter is expected to "re-enter the utility field (which means the distribution of power, electric light and gas) in the United States or Greece." It is suggested also that he will reside hereafter in England, his native country.

When President Roosevelt says he means to give the people of the United States cheap power, he means it. At Warm Springs he has been working on "a broad national program" for cheaper power. It is understood that he will not be "too drastic," but he will give the people what they need.

Not in importance to free air and fresh water is cheap power.

This will interest mothers, fathers and babies. Dr. Irving of Los Angeles says the death rate among babies has dropped because hard drugs have made mothers eat simpler food. When mothers eat rich food, the babies do not thrive. Simple, plain food means a better chance for the baby before it is born, and better nourishment afterward.

For 150 years a partner in New England's industrial growth

In 1784, when this bank was founded, New England's manufacturing interests faced a critical situation. The protection which had been provided by the war was swept aside and goods from abroad flooded the market.

James Bowdoin, having resigned as the bank's first president to serve as Governor of the Commonwealth, took swift action. In 1785 he summoned delegates from the thirteen states to meet in Boston to discuss ways and means of providing protection to safeguard the growth and prosperity of native industries. It is significant that the outgrowth of this meeting was the convention in Philadelphia in 1787 which met to draft our Federal Constitution.

In 1784 the total manufacturing output of the Boston area amounted to less than four million dollars. Our early records show that this bank was of vital importance in fanning this spark of New England's future industrial greatness. Today its services and banking capacity have expanded to keep pace with Boston's annual manufacturing output of over three hundred million dollars.

TIP ON AHERN DEATH EARNS $25 AWARD

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Who shot Francis Ahern, of Arlington, in Mexico? That is something that two governments will have to decide. But when he was shot, Francis O'Connell, of 294 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, knew that it was news.

He called the Boston Evening American-Library 6000—and today he is awarded the $25 prize for the best news tip of the week.

This goes to prove that you can never tell where a news story will break. It may happen right in front of your eyes this week. If it does, call the City Editor of the Boston Evening American and put yourself in line for next week's prize.

FIRE TIP WINS

The second prize of $10 last week went to William H. Nevin, of 171 Sherman street, Cambridge. He reported the fire that cost the lives of three little children.

At his request, we are withholding the name of the third place, $5, winner, who turned in an excellent report of an election.

The 10 $1 prizes—awarded each week—were awarded to the following:

Judge Katz, Boston Evening American, for calling the City Desk on a service for Carmo Puppolo, 83 Edinboro street, North End, for information about the finding of a dead man.

Thomas King, 15 Broadway, Malden, for word of a North End woman's death plunge.

CRASH EARNS PRIZE

M. G. Fahian, 244 Bridge avenue, Cambridge, for information about a car that plunged into the city's PK with its two occupants.

Jack Goldman, 11 Chambers street, West End, for reporting a fire.

John Lynch, 625 East Third street, South Boston, for knowing that it was news when a street car burst into flames.

Gale Emerson, of Danvers, for reporting the serious injury of a state trooper at Topsfield.

WORKER SAVED

James Hatfield, 514 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, for the story of how a window washer was saved from a nine-story plunge to Winter and Washington streets.

Name withheld; news of a jail break at Dedham.

Mr. Richard Tobin, Brooks street, Seaboard, for a report of the finding of a man's body in her town.

Gummen Release

Kidnaped Police

Paris, Tex., Nov. 27 (AP)—Two policemen, kidnaped here yesterday, were released near Antlers, Okla., early today after having been held captive by two men they had sought to question in connection with a holdup.

The patrolmen are Newt Baker and H. R. Mark. They entered a filling station to question the men, believed to be Ambrose Nix and Arthur Gooch, robbery suspects, who escaped from Holdenville, Okla., jail a month ago.

The suspects covered the officers with pistols and sped away with their victims.

Hunger Striker

Willing "To Die"

Bridgeport, N. J., Nov. 27—William H. O'Donnell, Vineland labor organizer, seeks "liberty or death" by means of a hunger strike, but Governor A. Harry Moore has ordered Cumberland county jail officials to feed him by force if necessary.

O'Donnell has maintained that his fast will end in his liberation or his death. Told he would die unless he resumed eating soon, he replied:

"I don't care."

Verdict Nears in

Ghenes Death Case

Warencot, Nov. 27—Angelo Ghenes being tried for murder of James J. Chabry, his Flushing neighborhood, may learn his fate tomorrow. Judge Nelson P. Brown intends to give the case to the jury early Wednesday afternoon if arguments are completed.

Rescued Crew Landed

Saint-Jean-de-Lux, France, Nov. 27 (AP)—The crew of the Spanish freighter Lollita, which sank off Cape Breton was landed here.

Larz Anderson Home Damaged

By Associated Press

Concord, N. H., Nov. 27.—The Perkins House, Concord's landmark, birthplace of Commodore George H. Perkins and now owned by Mrs. Larz Anderson of Boston, Mass., was damaged by fire early today. Damage was estimated at more than $23,000. The fire swept the interior of the wing occupied by Mr. and Mrs. August Anderson. Many valuable antiques were destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were forced to flee without a chance to salvage any personal belongings.

LEAHY CUSTODY BATTLE WAITS

Salem, Nov. 27.—Testimony in the custody fight for the four small daughters of Captain John E. Leahy, U. S. A., and Mrs. Louise M. Leahy, his estranged wife, was completed in probate court today.

Arguments next will be made by counsel for Mrs. Hannah W. Leahy of West street, Marblehead, paternal grandmother of the children, who is seeking their custody, and for Mrs. Leahy, the children's mother, who is opposing her mother-in-law's petition.

Testimony closed with a brief appearance on the stand by Miss Kathleen Leahy, sister-in-law of the children's mother, who reiterated, under questioning by Judge Edward R. O'Brien, that she had given to her sister-in-law letters torn up by Mrs. Louise Leahy after they had been received from Frank Kelly, Shepherd Washington inventor.

IDENTIFIED LETTERS

Proceeding here was the army captain's wife who identified three photostatic copies as those of letters she had written to Kelly and had given her sister-in-law to mail.

Attorney Frank H. Wallis, for the grandmother, had held Judge O'Brien that she had had copies of letters between Mrs. Leahy and Kelly. Then he produced the three photostatic copies.

Attorney E. Lawrence Howie of Salem, counsel for the captain's wife, objected to admissions of the copies, but Judge O'Brien asked to see them. After he had perused them he called the captain's wife back to the stand and interrogated her.

Q—Did you, on February 2, 1914 and 16, give three letters to your sister-in-law to mail to Mr. Kelly? A—Yes, I did.

Q—Please look at these and tell me if the same copies of the letters—and forget this "I don't remember" stuff and answer me frankly. A—(After looking at the photostatic copies) Yes, Your Honor, I gave them to her to mail.

Q—Have you ever made any attempt to get the original letters? A—No, Your Honor, I haven't.

Judge O'Brien then admitted the copies of the letters over Attorney Howie's objection.

Attorney Wallis started to read one of the letters, and got as far as "Sweetheart," when he was halted by Judge O'Brien.

Miss Leahy then was called briefly and testimony was closed.

Curley to Decide

Kaminski Fate

Springfield, Nov. 27—Following his inauguration, Governor-elect James M. Curley will be presented the petition for clemency in the case of Alexander Kaminski, sentenced to be electrocuted the week of January 20, according to the slayer's attorney.

The paper asking clemency will not be ready in time to go before Governor Rely.

Requests From the Needy

The Thanksgiving holiday is upon us. But in the joyous holiday atmosphere, misfortunes stand out more starkly and are felt more keenly.

Here are some requests that have been sent the Swap editor:

A 12-year-old girl, whose father is dead and whose mother is ill, writes for shoes size 5 1/2 for herself and a suit size 16 for her brother of 14.

One unfortunate reader is wearing rubbers instead of shoes. He would appreciate a pair size 9 1/2.

A Hyde Park man also is in need of shoes. He wears size 8 E.

Purchase of any kind is requested by a South Boston woman. She would appreciate a suit size 38 for her husband and little girl's shoes size 5.

Another mother asks for clothes for her girl aged 10 and 11 as well as for her size eight and seven.

She also wishes a coat size 44 for herself.

Confession Waited in Speer Killing

Northfield, Nov. 27.—Belief that unrelenting investigation will soon force the guilty person to confess was held as state police, aided by 75 CCC boys, renewed search for the shotgun used by the murderer of Elliot Speer, headmaster of Mount Hermon school, September 14. Preparations are being made to drain a second pond on the school grounds.

We'll Be Seein' Ya, Skippy

Not only Skippy and his pal—whom you see here in their toy shop form—but all the characters of 11 of the Boston Evening American's comic strips will be brought to life in Santason's big street parade, Thanksgiving morning. Santason's huge tri-motor plane, Northwind, is already roaring from North Pole fastnesses toward Boston. It will land here, near the Charles river basin, Thursday morning—and, at 11 o'clock, the big parade will be on.

Santason Leaves Alberta on Hop for Boston Parade

Edmonton, Alberta, Nov. 27.—In his tri-motor plane Northwind, Santason took off from the snow-covered flying field here today on another leg of his journey to the Jordan Marsh Company in Boston. The airman, son of Santa Claus, has vowed that he will be exactly on time for his landing on Charles River Basin at 11 o'clock Thursday morning for the Thanksgiving Day parade.

When he sets his plane down it will be the signal for one of the most beautiful and emotional parades ever staged in New England.

Readers of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser will see 11 of their favorite comic strips brought to life in the parade.

First and most important will be Popeye. In fact, it will seem to many as though Popeye, Santason and Santa Claus have more in common than just trying to give Boston the greatest thrill of their life time.

In addition to the Popeye float, there will be another big feature in the parade—a Popeye life and drum corps of 50 pieces, that of St. Joseph's Corps of Boston.

Other Americans and Adventist features will include Toonsville; Treasures; Bringing Up Father; Bubble and Monmouth; Barney Google; Skippy and his pal; Little King; Polly and Her Pals; Spark Plug and Mickey Mouse.

There will be music galore because Jordan Marsh Company sponsors of the parade, have arranged there would be 22 bands to keep the marchers in step.

Walter Smith, coronator, will render a special solo of welcome to Santason when the young airman is officially received at the Jordan Marsh Company by store officials at the end of the parade route.

San Quentin Fears New Prison Riots

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (UP).—Fearing that the present tension and disorder in San Quentin Prison may result in a major prison riot, the state board of prison directors has announced a legislative program to relieve overcrowding at the institution.

The announcement was made as a coronator's jury was holding an inquest over Arthur Ruls, killed in Saturday's outbreak.

Many Sailors Seek ERA Job

A riot call was sent out when would have to refer their case to a crowd of sailors stormed ERA's rectory in Washington.

MORROW GIRL NEAR DEATH

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Aubrey Morgan, 30, sister of Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, wife of the flier, was still in critical condition here with pneumonia today.

An operation for appendicitis weakened her heart and physicians fear that it may not be strong enough to stand the strain.

Mrs. Morgan, 10, Morrow, her mother, is at the bedside.

Sales Tax Bill for New York Rushed

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—A bill for a 2 per cent municipal sales tax was rushed into form today as the principal measure of an emergency tax program designed to produce revenue, totalling more than $60,000,000, the estimated cost of New York city's unemployment relief program through 1935.

Mayor LaGuardia, foe of the sales tax while he was a member of Congress, has agreed to the proposed municipal levy. Proponents estimate it would yield $60,000,000 annually.

Merchants are organizing to oppose the bill at a hearing tomorrow.

Lady Cathcart Denied Divorce

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—The petition of Lady Vera Hodge, the former Countess of Cathcart, for a divorce from Sir Roland Hodge, Tyneside ship owner, on charges of infidelity, was dismissed today by a court.

Lady Hodge had two previous husbands, the late De Grey Warren and the Earl of Cathcart. In 1928 she was detained at Ellis Island by immigration authorities who refused her admittance to the United States on grounds of "moral turpitude."

A ROBE DE STYLE of soft corded silk in white will enhance the brunette beauty of Miss Polly Wardwell this evening as she makes her bow to the world of society at a large dance at the Country Club, given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell of Brookline. . . . With her old-fashioned gown she will carry a corsage of fragile carnations. . . .

Mrs. Wardwell will receive with her daughter, gowned in sapphire blue satin and the younger sister of the debutante, Miss Mary Porter Wardwell, who will be at the usher's dinner, who wear a bouffant frock of pale green moire. . . . Miss Mary will be presented the winter after next. . . .

Dinner at Club
THERE WILL BE an usher's dinner for about 50 guests at the Country Club at which some of the season's loveliest debutantes will dine. . . . In this group will be the Misses Phoebe Keyes, Ruth Talbot, Eleanor Swift, Clara Wolf Peabody, Margaret Hardwick, Margaret Ekins, Martha Proctor, Jane Whitney and Eleanor Williams. . . .

Also Geraldine Field, Jane Mason, Joan Phinney, Olivia Osborne, Hendetta Wardwell, a cousin from Philadelphia, Marianna Dunn of Washington, D. C., and Barbara Stanley of Chicago. . . .

Performing usher duties will be the Messrs. Potter Stuart, coming on from Yale, Frederick Ayer, John Lee, Cleveland Floyd, Jr., Richard S. Storrs, Jr., John H. Cunningham, Charles A. Froeh, Jr., Alfred W. Sullyway, Peter B. Olney, Conover Fitch, Percival H. Lombard, Jr., Donald W. Baker, George E. Percy and Harvey E. Bundy, Jr., the latter two from Yale, and the others from Harvard. . . .

POLLY WARDWELL
Miss Polly Wardwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell of Brookline, a neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. Wardwell, a clever and ingenious person whose hobby is flowers and garden clubs, has planned the decorations to transform the Country Club into a setting appropriate for the beauty and social prestige of this debutante. . . .

Henry May Wheelwrights to Entertain
PRECEDING THE DANCE there will be several dinners given in honor of debutantes. . . . one by Mrs. Gaylord C. Cummin in Concord for Miss Edith Cummin. . . . another by Mrs. E. Lawrence Oliver in honor of Miss Susan Crocker. . . . a dinner at which Miss Frances Weeks will be the guest of honor and a joyous little party out in Newton Center at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry May Wheelwright in honor of Mrs. Wheelwright's niece, Miss Ruth Edmunds. . . . the guests at this dinner will include Miss Susan Dalton, Miss Alice Hutchins, Miss Barbara McKissick, Miss Kathleen Maynard, and the Messrs. Henry Little, Samuel W. Pillsbury, Mr. A. Regio, Joseph Bloomberg, Mark Dow, John La Farge, Francis P. Allen, and Barrett Wendell, 3d. . . . Miss Edmunds, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Edmunds of Brookline, leaves the end of this week for Baltimore where she will attend the Bachelor's Cocktail as the guest of Mrs. Glover Trenholme. . . . Sunday evening she will be feted at a fancy dress supper party by her hostess in Baltimore, Mrs. Albert Kiehl. . . .

Mrs. Francis Willing La Farge of Darien, Conn., the former Helen Rust of Boston, is coming on for the wedding on Friday of Miss Edith Wolcott to Charles DeWitt. . . . Miss Wolcott is a bridemaid at the wedding of La Farge, who will spend the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Paul Drummond Rust, Sr., at 415 Commonwealth avenue. . . .

A bright and shining light among the season's bouquet of deba, Miss Anna Hamilton Burnett, will be feted at a large dinner party tomorrow evening. . . . this will be one of the smartest of the dinners preceding the Swift ball at the Somerset in honor of Miss Elizabeth Swift. . . . it will be given by Miss Elizabeth Swift, Jr., her mother, Mrs. William H. Swift, and her father, Dr. and Mrs. Francis Burnett, the debutante's parents, who live in Manchester. . . .

Reading by Former Vassar Student
MISS EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, a former student at Vassar College, now one of America's foremost poetesses and winner of the Pulitzer prize for the best volume of verse, will read from her work on Tuesday, December 11, at 4 o'clock at the Hotel Statler, under the auspices of the Boston branch of the Associate Alumnae of Vassar College. . . .

This will be Miss Millay's first reading in Boston for several years and her appearance here will afford many lovers of poetry the rare opportunity of hearing and seeing her. . . . Outstanding Vassar Alumnae on the list of sponsors include Mrs. Paul F. Bauder of West Newton, Mrs. Ralph Bentley, Mrs. Martin K. Bovey, Mrs. C. Rodgers Burgin, Mrs. Duncan Carpenter, Mrs. Charles A. Colledge, Mrs. Harold S. Fuller, Miss Rue French, Miss Priscilla Gibbs. . . .

Also Miss Frances Dugan, Mrs. Wilbur K. Jordan, Miss Marian Hutchinson, Miss Marion Little, Mrs. Gordon P. Marshall, Mrs. B. Alden Thresher, Mrs. Willie A. Waring, Mrs. Roger A. Perry, Mrs. George Olmsted, Jr., and Mrs. Marcus Morton, Jr.

Society Leaders Attend Start of Volunteers' Campaign

AN INTERESTED AND DETERMINED social audience turned out, in spite of the rain last evening, to attend the Citizen's Appeal for Volunteers, executive board dinner, at the Copley-Plaza, in honor of Colonel Franklin Knox, editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, who spoke on "A Modern Social Problem."

Governor-elect James M. Curley and Miss Mary Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Henshaw were invited guests. Glancing around the room, Mr. Curley and Mrs. Curley noted Mr. and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Fuller gowned in green black chiffon over gold tulle; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Carney, Mrs. Carney in a cocktail ensemble of black velvet and gold; Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Reilly, Mrs. Reilly looking very chic in flame crepe skirt and gold lame tunic; Mr. Edward C. Donnelly, wearing a smart tuxedo coat with large sable collar; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Kiley; Mrs. Julia A. Pillsbury, in muberry velvet dinner gown with gold cloth jacket, and Mr. Ernest Smart, lipsticked red velvet and white fur hat, adding a striking note of color. Miss Ellen Bottomley, Miss Lydia Fuller, Miss Catherine Donnelly and Miss Mary Fuller were three attractive tuxers.

Among the attentive listeners we saw Mr. and Mrs. A. O'Connell, Mr. Edmund O'Connell, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Riorden, Major and Mrs. F. O'Dowd, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur O'Leary, Mr. and Mrs. George P. O'Connell, Miss Elizabeth Heeling, Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Nash, Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Manning, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. McCarthy and Miss Margaret McCarthy, Miss Alice Falvey, Miss Anna Dolan, Miss Frances Donnelly and the Rev. Robert P. Barry.

Welfare Unit Earns Prize
Brookline's welfare department has been well managed, and is free from graft and dishonesty, according to a report on relief work just issued by the board of public welfare.

Addressing the department staff Judge Daniel A. Robbins, chairman of the board, declared there is no place for dishonesty in welfare work.

On the basis of a survey by Clarence A. Brigham, efficiency expert, the board has decided upon a frequent check of each department, and has given appointments at 15 minute intervals, which should mean less work on relief projects, and recipients of aid will be permitted to choose their own doctor.

CREAMY, CHAP-PROOF LIPSTICK WORKS BLISSFUL MAGIC DEFYING WINTRY WINDS

Screen Tests for Daytime

By PRUNELLA WOOD

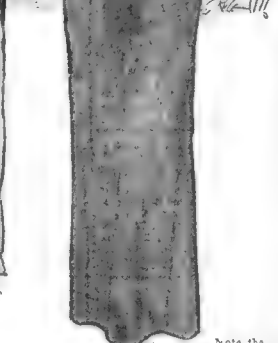

A CLEVER amateur seamstress can get many a tip from the clothes which our popular movie stars wear in their pictures. But many models shown can be bought in duplicate in shops which devote one dress department exclusively to such costumes. The three frocks sketched on this page are current hits, both on the screen and in the cinema shops, available to any girl who thinks she could look as well as Helen Morgan, for instance, if she just had the clothes.

When this merchandising idea was so young that it could scarcely walk by itself, it was the glamorous clothes, the very striking costumes, which were selected for copy. From them, people with pretty girls got up like Little Linton; miles of bridesmaids trotted up center aisles garbed in a Myrna Loy in her more flirtatious mode; and oceans of tea was poured by wintry creatures who copied their hostess' gown after Carole Lombard. There is one noticeable exception in the dressing of all moving picture actresses with their celluloid. They do a marvelous job of wearing furs. Whether it's a natural talent, or one they are tutored for by directors and such, they get away with it smoothly, which is more than can be said of the average female who meets about town. Even the dullest of them never looks lunched up and awed in a brace of silver furs; their fur collars do not seem to push their heads off their heads or muffle their features into oblivion. Take a good look at Mary Astor in her recent mystery play; she models fur as perfectly as she registers horror.

This is a frock that Helen Morgan wears in a recent picture; it's black wool with collar, cuffs and sleeve lining of white silk

Throw-In for Marked Finesse Is Not at All Complicated

By Josephine Culbertson

Contrary to the impression of choice of an opening lead was important, the throwing play is not particularly complicated. The declarer needs only to have a reasonably accurate count of the opponents' hands and to take the precautionary measure of stripping the opponents' hands of side suits. After the stripping has been done, one of the opponents is thrown in with a high card and cannot avoid making a forced lead into a tenace held by either the declarer or dummy. Sometimes this forced lead enables the declarer to take a winning finesse which he could not take otherwise as it is impossible for him to lead the suit from the right hand. At other times the forced lead wins even though the finesse would lose, as the declarer does not have to play from his tenace until both of the opponents have played.

An example of the first of these two types of forced leads is shown in the hand below. South, dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

COOK-COOS

CHRISTMAS EVE IN SCRANTON

Note—Aunt Bella has handed us what we consider one of the touching of all her biographical ditties—a story which reeks of self-sacrifice and unselfish generosity. Read it, friends, and then hand it on to some unsuspecting acquaintance who needs just such a warning of a time like this.

By AUNT BELLA

Brokers and plumbers and merchants,
Chiropractors, real estate men,
Butchers and bakers and candlestick makers
Are all alike under the skin.
I think I can say without bragging
That I know without doubt what I'm talking about
When I say every man is a beast.
I was only an untrampled flower,
A riddleless rose, you might say,
When I fell in the trap of a conscienceless chap
In the city of Scranton, Pa.
He called me his Dimpled Patience,
His unblemished Rambler Rose;
I believed him, the card for I never had had
An affair of amour, I suppose.
He asked me to loan him my savings;
I did so, he said, with a smile,
"You'll never regret your action, my pet!"
As he toyed with my fingering file.
I thought he would surely consider
Conventional marital ties;
I expected, of course, that he'd get a divorce
As a pleasant and grateful surprise.
I let him have fifty-six berries;
He took it and turned toward the door.
He counted it twice, then in tones cold as ice
Exclaimed, "I expected much more."
And what did he do with the money?
How did he spend it, the louse!
With this dough he was able to purchase the able Redskins he gave to his spouse!
And this is the brief Christmas story,
A story all sodden with pain—
If it helps other frails to beware of all males
Aunt Bella has not lived in vain.

Maybe it would help if radio ever lives spent as much time on the surveys programs as they do on the surveys of listener interest.

Arena Bargain Boxing ↑ Colgate's President

The Passing of Casey ↓ Landis Has Best Job
By AUSTEN LAKE

AS AN ORIGINATOR OF THE scheme to pay glove fighters at a flat rate of 50 cents an hour, with time subtracted for intervals between rounds, wrestling and periods of sprawling on the canvas, I should welcome Matchmaker Ray Case's plan to install cheap boxing at the Boston Arena.

It was some fun during the era of money frenzy and when hoodlum types were scoring offers of $50,000 for an evening of pittance boxing, to be ignorant at the overpayment of the fighters who made as much in ten minutes of sofa-cushion cuffing as a workman could make in a lifetime with a pick and shovel.

But just now, in volume of earning, the fighters are below the wage standard that the New Deal has set as the legal level, and I find that Mr. Case is going to charge a starvation scale of prices, 40, 60 and 75 cents, and ask his fighters to share in whatever profits.

This has served to uproot my old indignation and lead me to yearn for the return of the daffy, crackpot era when workmen paid from $35 to $40 to see two business athletes beat one another on the chin.

It is much pleasant to be sore about something than to be glad it's all over. It's a strain to go around being glad all the time.

I MOURN THE PASSING OF Eddie Casey as Harvard football coach. If, indeed, I am not burying him now before he is actually defunct.

Casey is not just a plain, haggard unfortunate who happens to make his living in the uncertain business of football.

Not to me, he is not!

I played shoulder to shoulder with Casey 20 years ago, when we were both smooth-faced lads at Exeter. He was a wispy youth then, bashful of manner and with a queer habit of ducking his head and grinning shyly.

He said "hi" to the instructors and "mam" to the ladies and earned his way by doing odd chores, like raking leaves in the autumn and shaking down furnaces in the winter.

Then, as later at Harvard, he had an unbelievable knack for wig-sagging through ladders, spinning, kick stepping, and cooing through their arms—a juvenile Houdini as an escape artist.

The intervening 20 years have left their mark in grooves beside his mouth, a glint of silver in his hair, and a stoop to his shoulder.

Well, I decided years ago that there was some question that I just would not attend to, and one of them is the firing of football coaches, particularly a nice, quiet, harassed guy like Eddie Casey.

LLOYD JORDAN, THE BLOCKY, fuzzy-browed coach at Amherst, who used to be one of Andy Kerr's assistants at Colgate, tells me the inside facts on the birth of the lateral pass, by which Kerr has handicuffed the opposition this fall.

Credit goes, not so much to Andy as to President George B. Cutten, himself an old Yale rugby player.

Cutten used to like to putter around the Colgate gridiron, and years before Andy hove in sight, tried to sell the lateral to his coaches.

They listened politely, hiding their impatience with an old duffer who ought to be sticking to his schoolbooks and went ahead with their routine.

But when Andy arrived, he experimented carefully and with Cutten devised the down-the-field lateral which has made his team the smartest, cleverest ball-handling unit in the game.

If you don't mind a late Thanksgiving dinner, motor down to Providence and catch a sight of what the well-equipped football team of the future is going to use. Colgate closes its season at Aldrich Field against Brown.

WHO HAS THE BEST JOB in sports? There can be only one answer—Judge Keneasaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, who draws upwards of $50,000 for a leisurely career amid scholarly surroundings.

Soon now, as is his winter custom, he will be jaunting down to Arizona to take the water baths and sun his dry bones on green golf courses. Later he will cruise around the spring training sites of the ball clubs, and after that idle his time until the World Series, which is his only period of fluster and worry.

The Old Judge, always a bit of a showman, has roused antagonism in certain spots, due to people who misunderstand him and who cannot appreciate the old gentleman who hides his true character behind the hammy makeup of an old-time, up-country congressman of the Teddy Roosevelt period, the baggy knees, the common people hat, the corkcrack finger, the piercing glare, the white shock of hair and the growly, distinct-attorney's voice.

Perhaps some of this anti-felting generates from the bitterness of folk who have no jobs toward one who has a better one than the President of the United States, with 1-10,000th of the President's responsibility and 10,000 times more fun.

A WEIRD STORY IS BEING handed about New Haven. It is said that the Dartmouth Club of New York, expecting that its team would and the victory drench and beat Yale on November 3, ordered a carload of green paint, in one pound cans.

The paint was, so goes the yarn, to be distributed among frenzied alumni to smear New Haven a green color. But when Dartmouth lost, the consignees evaporated from the scene and orphaned the paint, which now stands on a siding, gathering denunciations, while the paint company is trying to find somebody on whom to pin the bill.

SCHOOL TEAMS Purple Captain Huffs and Puffs to Blow Eagles Off Map

Worcester, Nov. 10.—The Holy Cross Crusaders, who played their first game in 1935 at the game played up here and were held to a scoreless tie. Last year we were far the better, yet the bronks cost us the ball game.

It can quote me and say that we not only can but will beat the Eagles on Saturday. Man for man we are far superior. The only black mark against us is the fact that I haven't played on a winning team against Boston College. That will be remedied this time.

The spot light was turned on a new team, at least he thought so when, before the season had opened, he handed me the assignment of picking an eleven of the best football players in the Greater Boston area.

It was a tough job, for the Greater Boston American football players in the Greater Boston area are not only good, but they are also smart. I had to pick an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area, and I had to pick an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area.

Just about as simple as a coach to be an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area, and I had to pick an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area.

But this is not a simple job, for the Greater Boston American football players in the Greater Boston area are not only good, but they are also smart. I had to pick an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area, and I had to pick an eleven of the best players in the Greater Boston area.

Froelich Mainstay of Unbeaten Team

The ends are John Grinnell of Tufts and Shawn Kelly of Harvard; the tackle, Roy Woodworth of Tufts and Stan Louisa of Northeastern; the guards, Dave Gough of Boston College and Herman Gundlach of Harvard; center, Stan Louisa of B. U. and Walter Froelich of Tufts.

Any coach with these 11 men on his squad could be packing a grip now and getting ready to trip to Pasadena and the Rose Bowl or shouting down Huey Long and his Louisiana State or Minnesota, Colgate or any of the other elite in national grid college.

As a team with defense on offense; brilliant ends; a stout pack of line backs in front of Louisa, a trio of guards, threats in Haley, Curran, and McNamara and anything else you care to find.

Froelich, Tufts' captain, is the mainstay of the unbeaten team, a star of a first and a bruising line backer, Curran and McNamara are the scoring threats of the team, with Curran being the best.

Gundlach, Harvard's star, is prominently mentioned for American football. He is the star of the team, and he is the star of the team.

Woodworth was a first team player in 1933, and he was a first team player in 1934. He is the star of the team, and he is the star of the team.

Grinnell and Kelly, Harvard's star, is prominently mentioned for American football. He is the star of the team, and he is the star of the team.

Injury to Belekiewicz Handicaps Latin

By Bill Connell

Public Latin School's football team is driving hard with a Thanksgiving win over Boston English its objective. Latin goes into the game without its first blocking back, yet the boys are confident they can still win.

The favorites in this oldest of games have rarely had much good fortune, and that adds to the Latin boys' confidence.

Walter Belekiewicz, who has been a star player for Latin, is out of the game due to an injury.

The Latin team is confident they can still win without Belekiewicz, and they are driving hard for a Thanksgiving win.

Jim London, standing as a challenge for Ed Don George's heavy weight title, is definitely one of the best fighters in the world.

Jim London is a very good fighter, and he is ready to start for Boston. He wants to prove his press agent wasn't exaggerating when he called him a new Langford. Mucky

ONE COURSE FOR BUSINESS IS NEEDED

By HUGH I. BRADSHAW
While the fact remains that the government is not a business, there must be some business-like procedure in the way of handling the government's affairs. In the past, the government has been run on a haphazard basis, and this has led to the present situation. The government must adopt a business-like procedure if it is to be successful in the future.

Utility Shares Lead Market in Brisk Advance

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR
The utility shares, chopping about the market for so many months, finally broke the advance today by their spirited advance. Action of the power and light shares, which have been the mainstay of the market, was the cause of the advance. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

COMPETITION IN AUTO MADE INTERESTS

By R. C. FORBES
Detroit, Nov. 27.—The Chevrolet Ford race excites white-hot interest in the automotive market. The following neck-to-neck fight, I understand, has never before been published. Registrations for passenger cars and trucks come in thick and fast. The Chevrolet lead is reported up to the first of October. Chevrolet, 868,801; Ford, 804,845. Chevrolet lead of 263,956. Chevrolet was a very bad day in the opening months of the year because of the shortage of cars. It has led Ford, but on a month's basis, Chevrolet is ahead. The final outcome for the year will be in the hands of the dealers. Chevrolet 1933 production was 828,777, against 830,000 for the year of 1932.

The writer's personal affairs have broken out on the upside after a 10-day period of averaging. The volume of the issues concerned has been sharply and the low of the market was slightly higher than the high of the market. The participation in the market was not as good as it was a few days ago.

Usually smart commodity prices are bullish on wheat. The buying of wheat and corn on moderate terms is not as high as the higher wheat. The market is a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

STOCKS MIXED

An irregular tone marked dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Trading was active. Boston was up nearly 2 and Brown & Co. preferred gained about 1/2. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET TRANSACTIONS

Table with multiple columns showing bond market transactions, including prices and yields.

Chart Chart: To follow the writer's charted average with maximum results one should keep charts on Atchison, Chevrolet and U. S. Steel. The chart is a good one. The market is a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Atchison, Boston & Maine preferred, also the A and B preferred shares were fractionally higher. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Daily Stock Analysis

COMPANY—Archer-Daniels-Midland. A leading producer and distributor of inedible oil products of the United States. The company is also interested in grain storage. The market is a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Grains Lower in Chicago Trading

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP)—Wheat and corn prices were lower today. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Shorts: With confidence of a million dollars, the market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

EARNINGS—Phenol year ended in 1934 showed $3.84 million. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, Nov. 27 (INS)—The cotton market continued higher today as the active trading of Monday was maintained, but profit-taking was evident. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

Dollar Lower at Close in London

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—The United States dollar depreciated 1/2 cent to the pound today, closing at 4.86 1/2. The market was a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

The gold group has been steady along in indecisive fashion for some weeks and holders are wondering if it should hold on. The market is a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

COMMODITIES—From a purely speculative viewpoint, this issue has a large stake in the paint and oil markets. The market is a whole lot better than it was a few days ago.

French Dishonesty and French Militarism --- the Evil Omens of World War

IF FRANCE is not actually driving for war, it is plain that she is doing little to avert it, or even to postpone it.

Always provocative, extreme in the assertion of her rights under all treaties, always willing to twist their text and by artful and specious construction to enlarge her claims, she is THE PERENNIAL MENACE TO WORLD PEACE, while piously professing a devotion to it.

Her conduct with relation to the impending Saar plebiscite is a case in point, and only the latest.

It is manifest from the semi-official utterances of French statesmen, accustomed to voice French intentions, that France is preparing to wriggle out of her obligations under the Treaty of Versailles as it applies to the Saar Valley. She is paving the way to another act of repudiation.

Reputation, as Americans have learned from French defaults on their war debts to the United States, HAS BECOME THE CORNERSTONE OF FRANCE'S INTERNATIONAL POLICY.

She has become so addicted to it, so proficient in it, and so shameless in its practice, that reputation is viewed by her in the cynical light in which some regard a lie—as the shortest distance between two points.

WHAT are the facts about the Saar?

For fifteen years France has had the use and product of the Saar coal mines, which are among the richest in the world.

During the same period, the political administration of the territory has been under the direction of a governing commission appointed by the League of Nations and answerable to it.

The purpose was to provide an interim control until a vote of the residents of the Saar could be taken, as to whether they desired annexation to France or to Germany, or the maintenance of the irregular status which has existed since 1919.

The Versailles Treaty provided that at the expiration of fifteen years, in January, 1935, the people of the Saar should express their free choice.

There has naturally been some electioneering on both sides—by those leaning to a German connection as well as by those favoring annexation to France.

But France has shown her hand in maintaining a menacing military force near the borders of the Saar and has obtained permission of the League of Nations, always pliant to French purposes, to throw French troops into the Saar for the maintenance of order, should occasion arise—which it has a way of doing, very promptly, where French interests are concerned.

IT IS clear, from the course of France in this respect alone, that she is already violating the spirit of the Versailles Treaty, and is resolved to nullify it altogether rather than terminate her profitable occupation, even though it was originally proclaimed to be temporary.

Already French spokesmen are deploring the provisions of the Versailles Treaty which provided for a plebiscite.

The terms of the treaty are now said to be "at least disputable."

The question is asked by no less a personage than Alexandre Millerand, the former President of France, in a signed article appearing in the Sunday Advertiser:

"Have we not the right to say that the solution was adopted CARELESSLY?"

There you have the typical French approach, when reputation beckons.

First confuse the question; then dispute the binding effect of the pledge; then bring forward a feigned issue—in this case, the alleged German interference with the freedom of popular expression; and finally, stepping clear from the encumbrance of all obligations, proclaim that in drawing the sword she is only performing "an international mission" which civilization has forced upon her.

Such tactics applied to the Saar plebiscite are nothing but a mixture of effrontery and dishonesty.

Millerand declares that the Versailles Treaty must be respected in all provisions advantageous to France, but not when France derives no benefit.

Germany must endure the Polish Corridor; Austria must suffer dismemberment without complaint; plebiscites favorable to France must be accepted by other nations which are parties to the Versailles Treaty; but if the Saar plebiscite, specifically provided for in the treaty, should by chance go against France—the France may with impunity disregard the treaty and the will of the people of the Saar, even if her course should plunge the world into another war.

FRANCE should not be suffered to retain the benefits of her agreements, while she repudiates her obligations under them.

The coal mines of the Saar were one-half of the Saar issue. They were awarded to France in consideration of the latter's assent to a plebiscite. Such assent was the other essential and integral part of the decision made by the Versailles Conference.

The great issue of war must not be allowed to turn upon the greed and crookedness of France.

If the Versailles Treaty, which was nine-tenths in favor of France, is to be repudiated in part, it should be deemed vitiated at its entirety.

After all things, the self-serving duplicity of France must not prelate another world war!

The Paths of Crime

They Lead But to the Cell

News writers make a humorous story out of the arrest of a young man named Kirkland who, Boston police officers said, told them he had found Deer Island a school in fine points of crime rather than a house of correction.

The comment was that, since he allowed himself to be arrested, he must have "bunked in his last exam at the Deer Island school."

Kirkland says he was sent to Deer Island as a first offender, and that what he learned there encouraged him to continue in an underworld career.

Deer Island is no worse—and is perhaps better—than other so-called corrective institutions.

It is said to teach taxpayers' money is being used to educate young men along evil lines.

An obvious remedy would be to lock up first offenders in a separate institution.

Thus more hardened prisoners would not be able to mislead them along crime paths.

Save Merchant Marine

New England Backs Up Dr. Walsh

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, Regent of Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, is the latest to raise his voice in opposition to foolish theorists who would destroy the American Merchant Marine.

Dr. Walsh sees nothing of merit in the plan to abandon American vessels and ship on foreign lines in order that foreigners might obtain more American money with which to buy American products.

Such a policy could only result in a monopoly controlled by alien interests, which would not hesitate to squeeze their helpless American competitors should conflict or emergency or the time for extortion arrive.

New England approves the clear-cut defining of the perils that would beset the American Merchant Marine. She knows the value of a strong and capable subsidiary naval force in time of stress.

Further, New England wonders at the faith of visionaries who would see the dollar spent for foreign shipping facilities would of necessity return as payment for American goods.

Back to Old Times

Quincy Bars Close at 11 P. M.

After countless experiments, the trend in the regulation of liquor sales is drifting steadily toward the methods of the pre-prohibition era.

Saloons generally throughout New England then closed at 11 p. m.

Now the big city of Quincy adopts the 11 p. m. closing plan. Now we have tired of "taverns," where many drink too much and are surprised to find they can't stand steady when they rise, another old custom may be revived.

We may see again the stand-up bars and brass rails for which our old hotels were famous.

Many now believe they, rather than sit-down taverns, make for temperate drinking.

If you drink, try to do it temperately anyway.

'Talking Down' to Children

It's a Bad Habit

If you insist on talking "tiny bits" baby-talk English to children they'll never really grow up to talk "the President's English"—that is, the clear and simple language which President Roosevelt uses in his radio broadcasts.

Dr. Walter Damrosch, orchestra conductor, who for many years has talked to audiences of children, sounds this warning, and it seems to us to be a very sensible one.

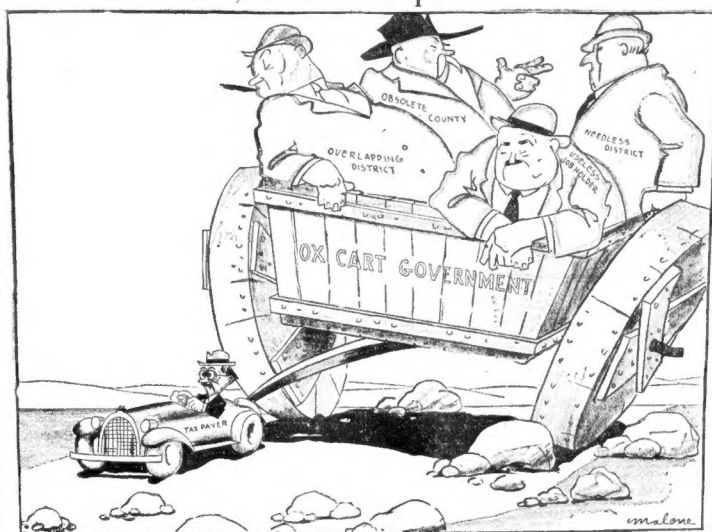

A good command of good English is a real asset to men and women, and the best way to get children on the track of such an asset is to talk sound, grown-up English to them.

If you talk down to your children they'll find it difficult to talk up later on.

Human Side of the News

Napoleon Again in Limelight

By Edwin C. Hill

France fears barbed wire in the streets. Premier Gaston Doumergue's government is overthrown and erect and tumultuous political forces are loosed. But from the dome of the Invalides there still emanates a strange, steady, ethereal blue light.

I remember seeing it years ago in days of tense unease in Paris and thinking then that Napoleon and all his deeds, for good or ill, were woven forever into the very fabric of France and that chaos would not prevail against the structure of law and government which he built.

AURA OF DESTINY

All the ties of internal disorder and foreign assault have not changed the fundamental character of the institutions he established. That blue nimbus over the Invalides somehow seems the aura of destiny.

One feels that France will live. Napoleon believed in destiny. Just before his death in St. Helena, still wearing his military sash and his invincible cocked hat, he wrote:

"All that is to happen is written down; our hour is marked; we can't prolong it a minute beyond what Fate has predestined."

Tamerlane was similarly fatalistic: as were Julius Caesar, Attila and Mohammed. Historians never scoffed at the "great man" theory of his history, but here is the great man, back again, as an instrument of destiny, ushered in by Bertrand Russell in his new book, "Freedom vs. Organization."

He finds that the political and institutional character of the world would be vastly different today had it not been for the impact of men of blood and iron on human events, as well as men who served the humanities.

They served to impel human action and they left patterns and compulsions which strangely prevail, even when the crowds are routing. "Throw the deputies into the Seine."

THE STRANGE GLOW Like ectoplasm, possibly sentience, it is bluish glow from the Invalides. Appraisals of Napoleon make unending controversy.

BOXES OF STUFF His "Cadastre," bigger than the Doomsday Book of William of Normandy, laid down the mores and bounds of public and private.

There was the camp bed which he had used at Austerlitz; a picture of Josephine, and two pictures of that son whose birth had filled him with exalted hopes, that who was to die obscurely in his youth, virtually in hand to that his rubrics and destinies.

There were silver toilet articles embellished with the great tiarings of Frederick the Great's alarm clock, the train of which sounded daily through those lonely rooms.

is proceeding with the work of rebuilding and restoring the house and grounds. Historic pieces of furniture are being rescued through Europe and England. Sir Stewart Spencer Davis, governor of the island, assists the restorers.

Historians have on record every piece of furniture and every article of wearing apparel which Napoleon used on this lonely mid-Atlantic rock, which gave him his martyrdom.

WRITES ABOUT

Expatriate-Patriots

The expatriate-patriot is a strange animal. He is a man who has lived abroad for ten or twenty or thirty years, during which time he has gratefully accepted the country of his nativity it was not a very pleasant thought.

There was one expatriate by his own choice and volition. There was nobody who had told him to go forth and shake the dust of our shores from his feet, and to accompany a little mud in England or France.

Therefore, in order to find an excuse for this strange act of selfishness, he was under a constant obligation to persuade himself and tell his neighbors that he had moved his household gods because life abroad was so much better than at home; that it would have been little short of a crime if he had tarried any longer along the shores of the Pacific or the Atlantic.

His dividends have become invisible. He can no longer pay the rent of the Champs Elysees. He lives in a little mud in England or France.

Next time these expatriate-patriots are coming home, they will find that the land of their adoption is a different place. They will find that the land of their adoption is a different place.
